Amendments Will Help Protect FHA Homebuyers

Some 340,000 people who have been stuck with defective FHA homes will be given the right to file claims for repairs by one of two housing amendments introduced by Senator Alan Cranston (D, California.) and approved by the Senate July 20.

A second Cranston amendment which won approval will unfreeze $72 million to provide low-interest loans to rehabilitate 12,258 older housing units -- including up to 1,120 San Francisco homes awaiting rehabilitation. Before funds for the program were frozen last January, 6,200 San Francisco homes had been renovated.

Both measures were attached to H.J. Res. 512 approved recently to extend authorizations and appropriations for FHA insurance, community development and housing subsidy programs.

Cranston and Senator Adlai Stevenson (D., Ill.) co-authored the FHA amendment and Cranston was sole author of the amendment to release the low-interest loan funds. Both Cranston and Stevenson are members of the Senate Banking Subcommittee on Housing.

"Anyone who buys an FHA insured home has every right to expect that on the day he moves in his home will be in decent, safe and sanitary condition," Cranston said. "Instead thousands of Americans buying FHA-approved homes have had their expectations sharred."

"They have discovered that the FHA has not protected them from buying homes with faulty wiring, unsafe and leaky roofs, defective furnaces, inoperative plumbing, and cracked foundations."

As an example, Cranston said, he received a letter from a couple in South Gate, California, who bought an older home that had been approved by the FHA. They were nearly asphyxiated when they turned on the furnace and carbon dioxide poured out instead of warm air, he said.

Cranston pointed out that many homeowners who get stuck with a defective home can't af-

Report On MCTA Petitions

Kenneth E. Thayer, a director of the Monterey County Taxpayers' Association representing Northern Monterey County from Aromas to Pajaro, reported recently on the progress of the county-wide petition signing drive to overturn the board of supervisor's 56/2 percent salary hike.

"4,300 signatures have been precincted to date in our effort to amass more than the required 5,949 by Friday, August 3rd," Thayer said.

He added, "Although the response has been overwhelming, we need volunteers to man card tables at shopping centers, do house-to-house circulating and help the precincters!"

The effect of securing the signatures, representing 10 percent of those voting for gubernatorial candidates in 1970, would be force the Monterey County board of supervisors to rescind their Ordinance No. 1968, adopted on June 5th, or put their self-given $800 to$ $1,250 per month increase to the voters at a regular or special election.

Last year the grand jury recommended a $200 per month increase. This year the Board appropriated an additional $600 per momth, per supervisor, for secretarial help plus relieving themselves of hearing assessment appeals by appointing a $225 per day board to do the job.

Dr. Ellis Honored For Community Achievements

Dr. G. Ernest Ellis, Pastor of Oceanview Baptist Church, Seaside, was the recipient of an award presented by the Monterey County Task Force, Inc., a non-profit corporation, for his outstanding community achievements.

The award was presented by City Councilman Steve Ross, president of M.C.T.F.I, at a banquet held in honor of Dr. Ellis, Friday Night, July 27, at Oceanview Baptist Church, before a packed house.

"Not only has Dr. Ellis showed us the way religiously," Councilman Ross stated, "but he has been instrumental in preventing the city of becoming polarized."

Councilman Ross cited some of the many accomplishments of Dr. Ellis, and stated:

"Not only is he a respected leader by the community, but also a respected leader of the ministers.

"The ministers in the city of Seaside play a major leadership role in the strength of unity in the community, and provide the moral catalyst that holds the brotherhood spirit of this community together. Dr. Ellis has been one of the mainstays in the foundation of this association," he said.

The award read: "Dr. G. Ernest Ellis, D.D., serving as a minister of the church, works with the community by maintaining a balance by serving as liason between the communities, working behind the scene, and aiding the disadvantaged groups."

Polio Immunization Of Children Urged

Polio epidemics -- a national scourge little more than 15 years ago -- could happen again, according to California's health director, Dr. J.M. Stubblebine.

"Immunization of children, especially preschoolers, against poliomyelitis has dropped to potentially dangerous levels," Dr. Stubblebine said recently in Sacramento.

He estimated that 27 percent of the children in California aged 1-4 have not received adequate polio immunization. In order to achieve a 90 percent immune level, 221,000 children need to receive at least two doses of vaccine, he said.

Dr. Stubblebine added: "With schools reopening in September, it is essential to reach as many non-immunized children as possible. Outbreaks such as we had in the 1950s could occur again, particularly in areas with large numbers of young, susceptible children." He reminded parents that state law requires proof of polio immunization before a child may be admitted to school in California. Polio is suspected as the cause of

Coyote Rampage Threatens Cattle And Sheep Herds

Coyotes are on the rampage in the Western United States and little or nothing can be done to remedy the situation.

A record 1973 coyote pup crop is the reason behind the most current onslaught on Western cattle and sheep herds, according to the California Beef Council. Coyote mothers anxious to nourish their young offspring are wreaking havoc with calves and sheep - to the desperation of Western Livestock producers.

Recent predator laws prohibit the killing of the coyote, the natural enemy of cattle and sheep.

Yet surveys show that ranchers view predators - and the coyote in particular - as the number one problem they face today with regard to cattle losses. Adverse weather, disease and poisonous plants are the secondary factors in cattle mortality.

In a 1971 survey by Dr. Jack L. Ruttle, Associate Professor of Animal Science at New Mexico State University, 72 per cent of a sampling of 460 individual producers stated they had lost livestock to predators. Sheep suffered a higher mortality than cattle. Among the predators causing losses, the coyote was responsible for the greatest number of kills, particularly ewes and calves. Seventy-six percent of calf deaths from predators were coyote-caused, while remaining percentages were attributed to bears, lions, eagles, bobcats and dogs.

IRS Says Freeze Is Still On

Cornelius J. Coleman, Acting District Director of the Internal Revenue Service for Northern California, has explained that the price freeze is in effect through August 12, 1973 with the only exceptions being in the food and health sectors. Coleman stated that a substantial number of telephone inquiries are still being received on rent controls, which have been exempt from control since January 11, 1973.

Food prices can be increased only to reflect raw agricultural cost increases since June 8, 1973 on a dollar-for-dollar basis. Decreases in costs of raw

New CTA President Sets Goals For 1973-74

"Theachers must assume greater leadership in the improvement of American public education and the society it serves."

With these words, Bryan Stevens, 51, new president of the 145,000-member California Teachers Association (CTA), on Monday, July 30 announced his goals for the coming year.

"The central responsibility of the teaching profession is the improvement of education. It is our job to stimulate the support of quality education for the children, our most precious natural resource, and for the democratic process. Teachers must do this by improving our currentpublic information programs, through political action and through the negotiations process," he said.

Stevens, who has taken a year's leave of absence as a government, economics and history teacher at San Marino High School, expressed concern over thwat he called "an emphasis on materialistic values in our society."

He noted that while our society expects teachers to teach respect for intellectual and moral values, for democracy, and to instill patriotism, respect and reverence in the children, the lack of strong support of these values from the general public is causing the institution to fail in this mission.

"Watergate is an example of the failure of the educational institutions to instill respect and reverence for the Constitution and Bill of Rights of this great Republic," Stevens charged. "The poor turnout of voters on elections, especially local, municipal and school board, is an indication of

New Financial Aid Programs Begin At MPC

"That no student should be denied access to post-secondary education because of finaicial need," is the goal of a new financial aid program now available at Monterey Peninsula College.

Mrs. Medric G. Wade, financial aids officer, said that the federal government, though the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, has established the "Basic Opportunity Grant (BOG).

The new program will help an estimated 1.5 million or more students this year who will be attending about 5,000 colleges or universities including MPC.

Mrs. Wade said the BOG program will provide a "maximum of $1,400 minus the amount of funds the student and his or her family can contribute toward the cost of the student's education."

To be eligible, the applicant must be a first-time freshman and must be a U.S. citizen or must have been in the United States for other than a temporary purpose and intend to become a resident.

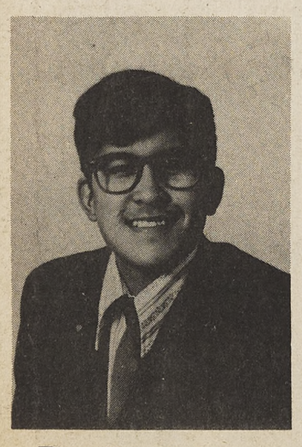
The BOG program is in addition to other financial aids programs at MPC which include Spplemental Education Opportunity Grants, National Direct Student Loan Grants, College Work-Study, The Federally Insured Student Loan Program, a Law Enforcement Education Program, the Extended Opportunity Program, and scholarships, grants-in-aid and other short-term loans. For the first time this year, many of these programs are open to part-time students, she said.

For more information on the BOC Program or other financial aids programs, contact the MPC Financial Aids Office at 375-9821, ext. 256. BOG applications are available at MPC, local high schools and the Post Office.

Local Youths Going To Study In Taiwan

In order to give the Oversea Chinese youth some understanding and appreciation of their Chinese heritage, culture, and recent progress, the Republic of China has sponsored annual summer Language Training and Study tours for native-born American-Chinese students.

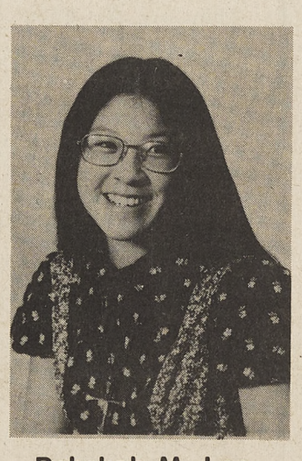
Deborah A. Lee



Timothy K. Lee

From Seaside, Timmy Lee and his two sisters, Deborah and Rebekah, have been awarded scholarships to the Summer Institute to be held at Fu-Jen University at Taipei, Taiwan, from August 10th to September 10th this year.

The three Lee children will be flying to Formosa to study the Chinese language and culture for two weeks intensively, then tour the island for two weeks before returning to USA. During their stay in Formosa, the Chinese government will cover all the expenses in schooling and traveling.



Rebekah M. Lee

The parents of these children are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Y. Lee, civic leaders of Seaside, who will provide for their roundtrip air transportation. It will be quite an experience for each of these children who will visit China for the first time in their lives.

Today's Army NEWS By SSG R. Cardwell ARMY RECRUITER

Hello everybody.

Have you tried to have a television, radio or record player repaired lately? If you have, you probably found that it took longer and cost more than you'd expected. That's because there just aren't enough qualified electronics service technicians to keep up with the workload. And with more people buying second and third television sets, two-way radios, stereo systems, and a host of other consumer electronic products, the situation will get even worse.

Electronic service technicians use sophisticated test equipment to diagnose trouble in electronic apparatus and make the necessary repairs. They must know how to use soldering guns, wire cutters, longnosed pliers, wrenches and screwdrivers. Many technicians specialize in particular kinds of circuitry such as color television, radiotelephone, or medical electronics.

From two to four years training and on-the-job experience is required to become a qualified electronics service technician. Technical, vocational and correspondence schools offer a range of courses in electronics. People without formal training are sometimes hired as helpers or apprentices, if they show an aptitude for the work. Many successful electronics service technicians received their initial training and experience in TODAY'S ARMY. Army electronics courses are among the best available, they're free, and they include information about the very latest electronic gear.

One of these courses, Tactical Microwave Systems Operation and Maintenance, provides a good introduction to audio amplifiers and several kinds of advance communications systems. This 15-week course conducted at Ft. Monmouth, N.J., qualifies a student to be a Tactical Microwave Systems Repairman. Many young men have used the training and experience gained in this Army Career Field to launch successful civilian careers in communications and radio and television repair.

While TODAY'S ARMY trains its people for the future it provides them free housing, free meals, complete medical and dental care and more than four weeks paid vacation every year. Beginners, for example, start at $307.20 monthly, before taxes.

Additional information about jobs and training is electronics is available at the U.S. Army Recruiting Station 431-Webster St., Monterey, or you can call 372-4742/372-0553.

Tea Honors Mrs. Moore

The Officers' Wives' Club gave a farewell tea in honor of Mrs. Harold G. Moore, wife of Ft. Ord's commanding general, recently at Fergusson Hall.

Army-Navy tablecloths graced the tea table, with accenting red and white table decor, reflecting Mrs. Moore's favorite colors.

Mrs. Moore's many community activities were summarized by Mrs. Henry J. Wereszynski, president of the club, and Mrs. William L. Webb, wife of the deputy commanding general. Lt.Col. Olga Collins, chief of Army Community Service here, presented a certificate of appreciation to Mrs. Moore for her enthusiastic endeavors on behalf of the community.

Cited in the certificate was Mrs. Moore's active participation in many post and community services -- the Army Community Service Welcome Committee, Officers' Wives' Club, Non-commissioned Officers' Wives' Club, American Red Cross Volunteer Program, the Post Nursery Council and the ACS Advisory and Fund Council.

NPS CPO Active In Community Affairs

What is it like to serve on the enlisted staff at the Naval Postgraduate School (NPS), where there are nearly 2,000 officers enrolled?

According to Chief Personnelman Ilustre A. Aguilar, Assistant Military Personnel Officer, "It's a profitable experience with demanding responsibilities, but I still find time for civic activities in the Monterey community."

Chief Aguilar is among 208 enlisted personnel, including seven women, assigned to various support, operations and logistics jobs at the Navys graduate school.

In community affairs, Chief Aguilar is manager of the "Orioles," a little league team in La Mesa Village, the housing area for Postgraduate School military families; a member of the credit committee of the Monterey Peninsula Navy Federal Credit Union; a council member of the NPS Saint Thomas Aquinas Catholic Chapel; and an advisor to the "Kabayan Club," a Filipino organization at NPS.

Not only is he impressed with his job at the Navy school, but Chief Aguilar finds the Monterey Peninsula "very beautiful country and the people in the community are military motivated. My family is very impressed with the beautiful and historic places around Monterey."

He highly recommends the Navy as a career for a young man or woman because of the outstanding educational programs, advancement opportunities, variety of professions available to those who apply, early retirement and various fringe benefits.

Chief Aguilar lists the highlights of his Navy career as "when I was meritoriously selected and advanced to Chief Petty Officer in May 1971 by a group of senior officers and enlisted personnel."

He is married to the former Miss Laarni Abang, and they have three children, Bernie, 15, Delane, 13 and Beverly, 10. The chief plans to retire in one or two more years, and someday hopes to own a coffee and tobacco farm in his native country -- the Republic of the Philippines.

TO PERFORM - Special attraction at Monterey County Fair's National Horse Show August 6-11 at Fairgrounds in Monterey will be The Foxfield Drill Team from Southern California, twenty young riders ranging in age from 9 to 18 who perform difficult dressage exercises, jump, and execute precision team riding without saddles or bridles. Horse Show, expanded this year to six days and separated from Monterey County Fair which will be held the following week, August 14-19, has attracted more than 600 entries.

Special Events Planned For Fair

A children's pet show on Wednesday, August 15, and a watermelon feed and talent competition for the the titles of Junior King and Queen on Thursday, August 16, will be features of the 1973 Monterey County Fair.

Preliminary screenings for the talent competition are beginning now in recreation departments throughout the county, and the finals will highlight the annual "Kids' Day" at the Fair, with children 12 years and under admitted free until 6 p.m. on August 16.

On the previous day, from noon to 12:45 p.m. at the Hunt Club Gate to the Fairgrounds, children with a pet will be admitted free and given instructions on showing their pets to the audience. Prizes will be awarded for the most unusual pet, the most obedient pet, the best dressed pet, and the best performing pet. In addition to the prizes, everyone showing a pet will receive free tickets for carnival rides.

Talented youngsters who have been screened in their home communities will participate in the special show on the main outdoor stage at the Fairgrounds at 11 a.m., August 16.

Horse Show Opens

More than 600 entries will make the 1973 Monterey County Fair's National Horse Show a truly expanded event, according to horse show manager Frank Jordano.

The Horse Show will be held in Pattee Arena at the Fairgrounds in Monterey August 6-11, preceding the Monterey County Fair August 14-19.

Jordano and his staff are busily reviewing the entries and assigning stalls for stabling and tack rooms as the opening day, August 6, approaches. Two hundred portable stalls will be erected in the area used for the carnival during the Fair, which, added to the 300 permanent stalls, makes an expanded show possible. Many local entrants will tie their horses in the livestock rings, taking them home at night.

Thirty-six classes have been added to the 1973 National Horse Show, most of them in the junior division which is moving toward Class A status. The open division is already Class A.

At the twice daily shows, 1:30 and 7:45 p.m., spectators will be able to view the entire variety of a morse show, including the exciting jumping events, the smooth handling of hackney ponies, the equitation events, the Western classes, the popular team roping, and more.

Special events during the Horst Show week will be the Foxfield Drill Team from Southern California and Jonny Rivers' Diving Mules from Missouri.

The Foxfield riders, who range in age from 9 to 18, perform difficult dressage exercises, jump fences and execute precision team riding without saddles and without bridles.

The Diving Mules act features two mules diving from portable towers into a special tank, along with other animal divers--a pony, a dog and a rheusus monkey. They will perform in a special area outside the arena before and after each horse show program.

Separating the Horse Show from the Fair this year was a Fair Board decision following last year's Fair and Horse Show, and both events are expected to benefit. Also, each will be a six-day event, as opposed to the five day combined event of previous years.

Theme of both Horse Show and Fair is "Down to Earth," and decorations will follow the Greek god theme, including pillars, urns, waterfalls, and cut-outs of mythological dieties.

TV Show To Explore Small Businesses

A brand new documentary in color, "Independent Business Speaks Out," will be shown over KSBW-TV, Channel 8 at 12 noon on Sunday, 5.

The half hour program is devoted to the question of whether or not, in view of current pressures and conflicts, small and independent business can survive in the seventies. Well-known national personalities express their views on the subject, and the importance of the independent business sector in the creation of jobs.

Monterey Peninsula Seaside — After Dark —

By Tom Nash

Distinguished guests from Oakland were the week-end visitors that invaded Seaside, and I almost lost my "cool" when I discovered that one of those in the area was Irene McLaughlin, the girl I promised to marry a "week from Tuesday". The only problem with her arrival was that it was not anticipated that she would see me. With Irene was her "fiance", the "Cat" I'm going to cut. His name, Vernon Moore, is a name I will long remember. They were invited down by old "dirty, evil, honory, worthless Willie Adams", who brought them down, via helecopter, which he paid for, just to get back at me.

Traveling with Irene were Alvin Reno and lovely Edith Coleman. They were deeply impressed by Seaside, for they were unable to get a motel accommodations. This was because of the races at Laguna Seca Race Track. Fortunately for them, I was here and was in a position to help them. I found accommodations for everyone but Vernon Moore. I suggested he try the basement of City Hall, where I learned there were accommodations available for special "guests". He declined this invitation, and my next suggestion was also declined. This suggestion was that I get a shelter half from Ft. Ord and help him erect it. It was my intent to bring in a few scorpions, spiders, snakes, and other insects to keep him company, and warm him through the night.

Also visiting in the area was Attorney Gerald X. Green, of Richmond, Virginia, who is in the Bay Area attending the Lawyers Convention in San Francisco. He was the guest of Mr. & Mrs. Ted Smith. I conferred with Attorney Green, trying to get some free advice, but he was non-committal. A typical lawyer.

As a fitting climax to our conversation, when I became adamant, Ted barred me out of the Fireside from 2 a.m. to 11 a.m. daily. I wonder why.

Seaside has inherited the title of "Tourist Town", "Retail Shopping Center of Monterey County," it is the nearest large city to Ft. Ord and other titles along these lines. Somewhere along the line, they have missed the boat completely, for Seaside should have received the title, and this is undisputed, "The City With The Loveliest Women".

Everywhere I turn there is a "fox", and since being here, I have received three citations for violation of Section 101.27 (Reckless Eyeballing With Intent To Look), and I AM GUILTY. As soon as I get my new glasses I shall be guiltier. In fact, they will have to put some blinders on me in order that I may drive down the street.

Speaking of lovelies. Have you been over to the Seaside Chamber of Commerce, recently? It is located at 505 Broadway, and there are all kinds of "Foxes" there. And they are doing things. The city will receive the fruits of their labor.

The Seaside Chamber is headed up by Verlaine K. Crawford, who is doing an excellent job of acting as a liaison between the community and business. She has recognized the need for a closer tie between the community, the Chamber and business. So within the near future I predict you will hear much more from this lovely lady. She has voiced her list of priorities for the city, and I totally agree with her.

The first need is for a Medical Clinic. For the City and the community to have let Harambe Medical Clinic fold is a dire shame. We spend enough in one week to keep that clinic open for six months.

Verlaine also pointed out a need for tegetherness. Togetherness between the Businesses and the community. And I had to agree with her again, for there is lacking, here in Seaside, that feeling of togetherness necessary for this to be an outstanding, self-sustaining, thriving community. The answer lies with togetherness. Working together for a common cause.

Never more vividly has there been demonstrated the need for additional motels and a hotel in Seaside, than has been demonstrated for the past three week-ends. No-vacancy signs dot the area, and one of the reasons we can't compete with Monterey for the tourist trade is the lack of accommodations.

The citizens can rectify this ill and provide jobs for many of its citizens, simply by togetherness.

I have just learned that Wayne and DeLynn Fields of Los Gatos are the parents of a newborn 7 lb. 5 oz. son, who was born Sunday, July 29. My congratulations. However, I have also learned that Wayne has already been over to San Jose State trying to get his new son enrolled for the summer session. These proud fathers, you have to really watch them.

Oh yes, don't forget the Retired Men's Social Club big "Summer Teen Dance," Saturday, August 4, at the Seaside Hight School Gym. It will be from 9 p.m. until. The MOOD MIXERS WILL provide the music, and all donations will go to the Summer Teen Employment Program. There will be free sandwiches and soft drinks. Tickets are at Steve's Bar-B-Que on Del Monte.

SUPERVISORS' SALARIES

By Friday of this week, the Monterey County Taxpayers' Association will turn in an excess of 5,949 signatures on petitions protesting salary raises the Supervisors voted for themselves. The salary increase that the board approved for itself, which would have become effective August 5, will boost yearly salaries from $9,600 to $15,000, and, for the Board Chairman, from $10,800 to $16,200. This is the first pay raise the Supervisors would have had in five years! And they deserve it!

It is most unfortunate that the Taxpayers Association should have made this item an item for a petition when they could have made a bonafide issue over the $3,000,000 the Board is planning to spend on the County Jail! The voters, last November, disapproved spending tax dollars on the jail!

If the Taxpayers Association would analyze what they are attempting to accomplish with this petition, common sense would tell them to cease and desist. Why? Because only the wealthy could then afford to be a Supervisor on $800 a month - if the Taxpayers Association is successful. This would mean that an average income - or low income person in Monterey County could not afford to run or serve as a Supervisor.

From personal experience and observation I know that each of our Supervisors put in far more than 40 hours a week. They are constantly attending other meetings, other than their regular Tuesday meetings, in doing their "homework." Prior to the last election, all candidates stressed the fact that a Supervisors duties required his full time attention. It is my firm conviction that we should pay our Supervisors a living salary obviating a necessity for them to have other sources of income.

As a matter of fact quite a number of other counties pay their supervisors $15,000 annually. San Luis Obispo County Supervisors recently granted themselves a salary increase to $15,000 annually and that county has far less problems to resolve than Monterey County!

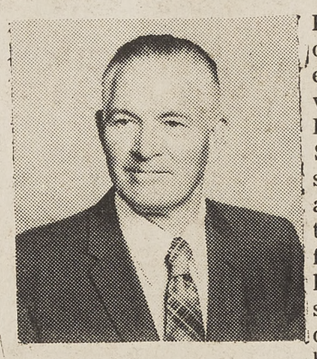
I would strongly urge our Board to stick by their decision even though you and I will have to pay the bill for an election. In this instance the Monterey County Taxpayers Association is actually doing a dis-service to the average taxpayer. The only way to resolve the matter is through an election and the people will have the final say.

In the final analysis it is a matter of equity and a question of whether only a wealthy man can afford the position of Supervisor.

The Supervisors more than deserve a salary of $15,000 per annum. And I'm convinced that the majority of our taxpayers agree.

As I See It

BY MEL VERCOE



President Nixon made two or three serious errors besides the obvious errors. Appointing Elliot Richardson to the Attorney General job left something to be desired, because Richardson later, under public pressure, selected Archibald Cox to be Special Prosecutor, and he really missed the boat in not checking out Mr. Cox, because Mr. Cox has demonstrated already that he is going to pursue the Watergate scandal anyplace it may lead, including Nixon's oval office.

Another serious error was in not completely silencing John Ehrlichman, because Ehrlichman's testimony to the Senate Watergare Committee has been a virtual indictment of Mr. Nixon. For several days Ehrlichman's statements and manner presented a vivid picture of almost unbelievable right-wing paranoia that apparently was the main driving force behind the whole mess that eventually surfaced with the apprehension of the Watergate burglars.

And to support some of his own personal actions in the matter Ehrlichman justified himself by making it clear that this or that represented the President's opinion. An observer would have to be extremely naive to believe very much of what Ehrlichman told the Senate Committee. He stoop up straight and tall and took an oath to tell the truth, then proceeded forthwith to tell definite lies. It is frightening that such a man had bef delegated so much power by none other than the President of the United States. It is also frightening that Mr. Nixon is using the power of his office to suppress evidence that probably would clarify for all time what exactly took place and who took part in it.

With 3 Americans out of 4 expressing the opinion that Mr. Nixon was involved in either the planning or the cover-up or both, it would seem natural that the would want to clarify the matter, unless the truth would be undesirable to his political career. He has opted to stick tight, making it impossible for the Senate Committee to obtain evidence bearing on the case, and has expressed his willingness to abide by the Supreme Court's decision when the matter reaches that thoroughly unpredictable body of men. Here, again, there is not a lot of trust in what used to be justice, because for roughly seven years the Supreme Court has refused to make a definitive ruling on the matter of the Constitutionality of the Vietnam war, admittedly at least once because its finding would be embarrassing to the executive branch, having to stop a war right in the middle of it.

Enhancing The Employment Climate

By Lou Haddad

Compared to a few years ago when the hue and cry was to alleviate the job shortage, the local employment picture has improved greatly. No thanks to the "aginers" who seem to delight in opposing projects which definitely will enhance the prospects of the locally unemployed.

Take the application submitted by Seaside to the Coastal Commission (K-Mart) for instance. Although several commission members showed their concern that the project would not be compatible with the objectives of Proposition 20, their concern appeared genuine. Many complimented Seaside's efforts to eliminate blight and build a community which can stand alongside the others on the Monterey Peninsula.

Surprisingly though, Commissioner Julian Camacho was adamant against Seaside's application. He never wavered in his opposition during the entire hearing. His attitude was puzzling and it made one ponder his motive. Looking back over the recent Congressional election when he was an unsuccessful candidate, and the possibility that he may again run for that office, one can only conclude one of two things: Either he has recently become an avowed coastline "protector" and will oppose any development near the coast, or he holds a personal grudge against many of the city officials, past and present, who didn't support him in that election. We certainly hope it is the former.

There is no doubt that K-Mart will provide many things for Seaside: sales tax dollars, eliminate blight AND JOBS. The Seaside Chamber of Commerce has gone on record several times in favor of that project, and the Board of Directors are to be complimented for their farsightedness.

It is pleasingly noticable that Seaside's merchants have extended their hands to Seaside's 32 percent minorities. Banks, retail stores, garages and auto dealers are certainly doing their share to improve the lot of the disadvantaged. The city father continue to press for more jobs. Although far from perfect, definite progress is being realized.

Perhaps the following proposal may further encourage others to bend a little: The Chamber of Commerce consider support of city legislation which will decrease a merchants business license proportionately with the percentage of minorities hired by him. It's simple. For example, suppose a businessman employed ten people and three were members of minority groups. That would be 30 percent. That businessmans license would decrease 30 percent. Simple.

In fact, there is nothing wrong with this idea being applied Peninsula-wide.

Here's a piece of news that may raise your eyebrows!

According to the famed columnist, Henry J. Taylor, the United Nations has only 26 developed nations, and a vote controlling majority block of 106 "undeveloped nations." These nations contain but 10 percent of the world's population and contribute only about 5 percent of the United Nations' assessed budget.

In the meantime, the United States is borrowing $416,681.48 per day to keep this questionable U.N. group afloat.

Isn't it about time Congress investigated this monkey on our back and relieved the hard pressed taxpayers of this unnecessary burden?

Plan New Project

London--The British Leyland Motor Corporation has announced one of the largest motor car investments in history--a five-year project to cost $750 million.

BLMC, formed in 1968, produces such autos as Austin, Morris, MG, Wolseley, Jaguar, Daimler, Triumph and Rover in addition to buses and trucks.

The new undertaking, which was announced by Chairman Lord Stokes on BLMC's fifth anniversary, calls for emphasizing middle-range and sports car operations of the Triumph, Rover and Jaguar factories.

A whole new family range of cars was to be presented late this month. The company had earlier announced its plans to produce a new model every six months.

Chamber of Commerce Progress Report

by Verlaine Crawford,

Where have we been? Where are we going? Why?

It's time each of us look at our goals as individuals and as a community. We need to eliminate divisions and begin to work together, for there is much to be done.

Last week I attended the Institute for Organization Management at the University of Santa Clara. This Management Seminar is put on by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and is meant to help Chamber and Association Managers to become more professional. It included information about motivation, psychology, sources of income and information about legislation on the state and national level of government.

The Seminar started out slow for me. Much of the information seemed to be a repeat of last year. Then on Wednesday we had a class on Group Action. Motivation and human needs were discussed. Suddenly, I began to fit the pieces together and developed a new understanding of what motivates members of the Chamber of Commerce, what motivates you and me.

The instructor pointed out that needs lead to action which result in our final goals. So the basic needs are first physiological (food, shelter, etc.), then after that most basic need is filled, we are able to advance to the need of safety orsecurity (this would be health benefits, pension plans, social security on the job). If that requirement is met, we move to the next highest need, which is social (we join clubs and organizations, have parties, get married and raise families). Once the social need is fulfilled we develop the need for self-esteem or achievement (we know we are doing a good job, or can cook well for our families, or that we are benefitting our community through the work we our doing on our own time).

The last highest need is self-realization (this means that we not only know we are doing a good job, but we love what we are doing). These are continuing needs, and we have a tendency to move up and down the scale of needs as time passes. We may want a bigger house or car. This would come under physiological. We may want a different job. This may come under self-esteem.

So the needs would line up as follows, with the bottom being most basic: self-realization, self-esteem, social, security, physical or $.

What does this have to do with Seaside and the Chamber of Commerce? I thought that most members of the Chamber of Commerce had joined the Chamber because they wanted to make more money. But according to a poll that the national Chamber took on business and professional men and women across the nation, they joined the Chamber of Commerce because they wanted to do good in the Community. They really want to make the Community in which they do business better and stronger.

Another national pool showed that the average citizen is now looking to business to solve the problems of our society. Most people feel that business people have the knowledge and experience to make new social programs work.

So, suddenly I realized that the needs of the Chamber members were the same as the needs of the Community leaders, each want to do good for the community.

What can we do? What are the needs of Seaside as a community? This is what we need to discuss. We need to have a giant meeting to discuss these needs. We should set priorities and then get the job done. Some needs I thought of, which may or may not be important (that's for you to decide) could be: a modern health clinic for Seaside (this is under consideration by the County), the new library, the post office, an entertainment center, a hotel and tourist attraction, a restaurant with meeting room facilities..... These are just ideas....but the main reason I mention them is to get you thinking.

Next week I hope to make plans for a Community Forum, that is a giant meeting with all the leaders of Seaside to get together and discuss what the needs and goals should be for our City.

Court Decisions On Job Bias Result In Changing Attitudes, Report Notes

New York--Recent court decisions enforcing the nation's nondiscrimination laws are spurring significant changes in company personnel policies and practices, according to a comprehensive study released by the Conference Board.

Companies are setting up wide-ranging programs to identify and eliminate barriers to equal employment opportunities for Blacks, women and other groups protected by law. Says the 100-page study:

"After nearly a decade of confusion and misunderstanding, the meaning of federal laws and regulations requiring nondiscrimination in employment is becoming much clearer as a result of a growing body of federal court decisions."

The study traces the evolution of these federal laws and regulations during the last decade, focusing on the changing perspectives of business. It includes excerpts from key court decisions and full texts of federal nondiscrimination laws, regulations and guidelines, as recently amended.

Company personnel officers, noting that only within the past year have they received reliable guidelines for action, make these points:

* The courts are holding that it is the results of an employer's actions, not his intentions, which determine whether discrimination exists.

* Business necessity is the only basis upon which the courts are permitting an employer to justify continuing discriminatory actions.

Comments the study. "There are still many areas in which the courts have not yet issued rulings, but the broad outline of their underlying approach to nondiscrimination is becoming increasingly clear."

* Increasingly, the courts are requiring that companies take affirmative stepstoerase discrimination: to seek out and employ qualified members of all groups protected by law for opportunities throughout the organization, wherever they are clearly underrepresented; and to avoid carrying forward any unnecessary adverse effects of past discrimination upon present employees. Like antitrust matters, questions regarding nondiscrimination in employment because of race, color, religion, sex, national origin and age appear likely to be matters of top management concern for many years to come.

The study notes that most companies are not opposed to providing equal employment opportunity "once they know what this means." But it also points out that few companies "seem to be aware of the requirement that they ensure as nearly equal employment opportunity to all protected groups as business necessity will permit.

"Most still think in terms of preventing isolated cases of overt discrimination in their companies or in terms of ensuring evenhanded application of whatever personnel policies and practices the company has deemed appropriate. These are necessary ingredients in any nondiscrimination effort but court decisions make clear that they are not enough."

Art Of Acrobatics Is Centuries Old In China

The Chinese have elighted in the art of acrobatics since at least 200 B.C.

By the Han Dynasty (206 B.C. to 220 A.D.) it was a polished art.

The skill and grace formed by centuries of study have been passed down to the famous Shenyang Acrobatic Troupe of the People's Republic of China which was recently seen on television for the first time.

During the past 2,000 years, acrobats have joined strolling players, puppeteers and musicians who wandered the countryside of China--much as circus performers and minstrels did in ancient Europe. And like the strolling minstrels the acrobats of China told stories through their actions--depicting folk tales in their own unique way.

Vivid stories of lions and the creation of human pagodas constitute part of repertoires of the many acrobatic troupes performing in the People's Republic of China now as ago.

Originally they performed for aristocrats and were paid by wealthy noblemen than. Acrobats became popular with the people of the countryside, as early as the 13th century.

In the early 20th century, activities of acrobatic troupes were sometimes curtailed, for fear they might use their art as a cover for anti-government work.

To the Chinese, acrobatics is a special skill. Experts are envied. The performers must practice constantly, to hone their talents.

Troupes are often formed from families--not unlike the Western circus tradition--with skills handed down from generation to generation.

The skill was so important in the lives of the Chinese of the Sung period, 960 to 1276 A.D. that objets d'art depicting jugglers and gymnasts are among treasured relics of the period.

During the same period, the Taoists began incorporating acrobatics in their lifestyles as a way of perfecting mental and physical coordination.

For a while the emphasis on Chinese acrobatics began to die. As recently as 25 years ago, the art of the gymnast was almost completely lost.

In 1949, the government began to subsidize troupes to revive the art form. By the mid-sixties, the troupes were again involved in the ancient folk art of their country.

The People's Republic of China, by endorsing and encouraging acrobatics as a folk art, dramatically combines the past and the present in the cultural lives of its people.

The performance of the Shenyang Troupe is a perfect example, as they recreate the tales which are thousands of years old yet have great relevancy today.

Concerts To Be At Foothill

As a result of a $200 grant to the Park and Recreation Department by Mr. and Mrs. Sabu Shake of Old Fisherman's Grotto On Wharf #1, the last in a series of four special children's concerts will be held at Foothill Playground this week.

This concert will be held at Foothill Playground Thursday, August 9 at 2 p.m. and will feature special children's material presented by Folksingers David Baumgarten and Jeff Cook.

The Monterey Park and Recreation Department commends the merchants, individuals and organizations such as Old Fisherman's Grotto, who have seen the value of helping to bring new cultural programs to the community through their financial contributions.

To Speak At UCSJ

Socioeconomist Robert Theobald will speak on "Futures Conditional" at California State University, San Jose, this Friday, August 3. The 8 p.m. talk will be held in Morris Dailey Auditoriu

Tickets for the lecture will cost $2 for general public and $1 for students and may be purchased at the door.

A well known lecturer at major colleges and universities across the country and a popular guest on television talk shows, Theobald is the author of several books dealing with the future, including "Futures Conditional" and "An Alternative Future for America."

The British scholar currently serves as a consultant to businesses and organizations.

In 1970 he wrote a pamphlet for the United Nations which examined the directions which could be expected during the seventies under two assumptions -- the possible dangers if policy directions were not changed substantially and how existing problems could be solved using man's potential from his knowledge and technology.

The speech is co-sponsored by the University's Cybernetic Systems Department and the Creative Initiative Foundation.

Amendments Will Help Protect FHA Homebuyers

ford repairs and are forced to default on their mortgages.

"Such defaults have been costing the taxpayers an average of $3,850 per unit or some $12.5 million per year, according to HUD estimates," Cranston said.

Some 5,000 repair claims already processed by HUD under a limited program previously authored by Cranston have averaged only $815 per housing unit. HUD officials estimate, however, that 345,000 people have purchased defective FHA homes since August 1969.

The Cranston-Stevenson FHA amendment covers houses sold under three sections of the National Housing Act: Section 203, the basic home mortgage insurance program; Section 221, which insures loans for homeowners displaced by federal construction and for families earning approximately $6,000 to $10,000; and Section 235, which provides a subsidized mortgage interest rate for families earning approximately $4,000 to $7,000.

After wide abuses involving FHA inspections of Section 235 housing were first disclosed, Cranston introduced in 1969 a bill requiring HUD to pay for the correction of defects that should have turned up in FHA inspections.

A watered down version was enacted the following year authorizing the HUD Secretary to compensate victims "of FHA's sloppiness, rather than making this mandatory as I had proposed," Cranston said.

"What clearly is still desperately needed is what I originally proposed and made applicable to all FHA-appraised housing," Cranston said.

The new Cranston-Stevenson amendment will restore the original intent of the legislation and expand it to cover Sections 203 and 221.

To insure that all eligible homeowners know of their right to apply for financial aid to correct defects or be reimbursed for repairs already made, the amendment requires HUD to notify potential claimants of their rights by certified mail.

The second amendment will provide 3 percent loans to rehabilitate 12,258 housing units in older neighborhoods.

The measure would release $72 million in funds for the Section 312 housing program -- a program that has already provided loans to rehabilitate 45,579 dwelling units.

"The default rate on Section 312 loans has only been 4 percent," Cranston said. "The program has proven its cost effectiveness."

Cranston noted that in San Francisco the average cost of rehabilitating a home has been $4,100 as compared to between $15,000 and $35,000 for new construction.

"The Section 312 program has preserved the beauty and character of older neighborhoods at far less cost and with far less disruption than if these areas had been cleared for urban renewal," Cranston said. "And more importantly, it has enabled thousands of families to rehabilitate homes that might otherwise have been abandoned or torn down."

current illness in a 4-month-old Pomona boy, although definite confirmation must await the results of laboratory tests.

Polio vaccine is available in most local health jurisdictions, Dr. Stubblebine said. Children can be immunized by private physicians or in health department clinics.

Local health agencies usually do not charge for the service, he said, but recent cutbacks in federal funds for purchase of polio vaccine may result in curtailed programs.

Since the advent of Salk and Sabin vaccine immunization programs, starting in 1955, the occurance of polio in California has been reduced to nearly zero. In Mexico. Twenty cases of polio in 1967 and nine in 1968 were Mexican residents brought to California for treatment, Dr. Stubblebine said.

Moscone Wants Investigation

Senate Democratic Leader George Moscone made public the contents of a letter to Fresno County officials asking a full and complete investigation of the alleged beating of nine imprisoned farm workers in the Fresno County Jail recently.

Senator Moscone, in a letter to the Fresno County Sheriff, Melvin Willmirth, and the Fresno County District Attorney, Donald Pitts, asked for a copy of reports they turned up.

"My staff has been told details of the beating of prisoners by officers armed with billy clubs inside the jail. Apparently the officers singled out individuals whom they suspected were farm worker leaders and forced them to walk or run past officers inside the jail. As they did, they say they were beaten.

"When they were released from jail, at least two had suffered serious and traumatic injuries, which the officers had not recognized as serious enough to warrant hospitalization.

"If these charges are true they represent an attitude of callous indifference to human values."

Senator Moscone called upon the Sheriff and District Attorney of Fresno County to make an immediate determination whether their offices are capable of a balanced and tough inquiry to find out how the beatings occurred, and what can be done to prevent further such outrages.

"If Fresno officials find they cannot conduct an unbiased inquiry, they certainly can make good use of the offices of the State Attorney General," said the letter from Senator Moscone.

CTA President Sets Goals

the failure of the schools to motivate Americans in the democratic process. Instead, we have great pressure and enthusiasm and motivation to utilize the schools as giant job training centers.

Stevens added that, of course, schools should help with job training, but because of loack of sufficient financial support the last few years, many of the social science and humanities programs have had to be curtailed.

"We have to teach these great human values and not just how to make a buck," Stevens declared. "If we just teach the kids to make a buck, the result is corruption in government and consequent disrespect for the political process, violence and vandalism in the schools and on the streets, and a spiritual degeneration of unprecedented proportions. The hallmark of a totalitarian society is materialism."

Stevens said he hopes that while president of CTA he can help build greater respect for the classroom teacher, in addition to helping to enhance education and intellectual development as a more desirable goal in American society.

"Often in the past teachers have been held in low regard by the rest of the community," Stevens said. "This is reflected by the low salaries, which, fortunately are slowly improving. It is also reflected by the poor physical plants, lack of supplies and materials, and crowded classrooms too often experienced. Not only that, our literature, films, radio and television often project unflattering stereotypes of teachers. But teachers are working to change all this through stepped-up public relations, political action and negotiations with school boards."

CTA's number one priority, Stevens noted, is the passage of a collective bargaining bill. CTA is co-sponsor of SB 400, a collective bargaining bill for teachers and professors. CTA also strongly supports AB 1243, a collective bargaining bill for all public employees.

"This is not just salary and fringe benefit bargaining legislation. It takes in all conditions of employment, including curriculum and instruction policy making. This enables teachers to determine whether these conditions enhance or adversely affect their ability to live up to their professional commitments," Stevens declared.

IRS Says Freeze Is Still On

agricultural products must also be passed through on a dollar-for-dollar basis. Coleman noted that each person in the distribution chain who experiences a change in the prices for raw agricultural products must certify to the purchaser, on his invoice, the amount due to an allowable cost increase or decrease on a dollar- for-dollar basis. This certification must have been made before the retailer can cnange the shelf price of the product affected. The retailer is not required to supply any certification to his customers. The second stage of the food price regulations, effective September 12, 1973, basically provides for the passthrough of all cost increases to the consumer on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

Coleman stated that of the 1180 investigations conducted by Stabilization personnel during the preceding week, 20 resulted in rollbacks or refunds, primarily in the areas of gasoline service stations, prepared food services, and a municipal golf course. All investigations were conducted with the complete and full cooperation of the firms, said Coleman.

New Programs Set For Fort Ord

Work experience credit for servicemen working toward degrees or certificates through Monterey Peninsula College's on post education program at Ft. Ord has been approved by the chancellor's office of the California Community Colleges.

According to Dr. David Hopkins, associate dean of instruction, Ft. Ord students now will be able to earn up to four units of work experience credit beginning in the "Fall II" eight-week session at Ft. Ord which begins on October 23.

Patrick Mulcahy, coordinator of the MPC program at Ft. Ord, said he expected some 300 students to enroll in the program. He also said the work experience program is illustrative of the "Servicemen Opportunity College" concept.

The work experience option has been available to students at MPC for several years. It gives students the opportunity to explore a career choice by actual on-the-job experiences while it also allows them to gain college credit. However, students must be enrolled in at least a total of eight units of course work including work experience credit to qualify for the work experience program.

Dr. Hopkins said two package programs would be available.

In a single eight-week cycle program, students would register for two courses totaling six units of regular college credit plus one to four units of work experience. As an example, said Dr. Hopkins, a student could take a course in English or history and a course in electronics, and be employed in an electronics related job.

Under the second option, students could spread the work load of this program over two cycles or 16 weeks by taking one three-unit course each cycle plus work experience.

Dr. Hopkins said the new program is unique to MPC and Ft. Ord. "It will give military personnel coming up for retirement an opportunity to investigate and prepare for a career in civilian life and earn college credit at the same time," he said.

AnnelisaMooreGraduatesWithHonorsFromUCSJ

Mrs. Annelisa Moore, the lovely daughter of Virgil London, 1521 Costa Street, Seaside, graduated with honors from San Jose State, recently.

Mrs. Moore's history of honors dates back to high school, which she attended in Frankfurt Germy, where she received top honors, and won a scholarship to Monterey Peninsula College. She won another scholarship, and top honors, which permitted her to attend San Jose State University.

She was elected vice president of the Professional Women's Education Sorority.

She received her California Teachers Credentials and will begin her teaching career and her Post Graduate studies at San Jose State.

She is married to William Moore who also graduated from San Jose State University.

MPC Mail-In Registration Is Underway

Mail-in registration for Monterey Peninsula College's some 225 evening and weekend courses is now open for the 1973 Fall Semester.

With enrollments expected to climb and the college's goal to better serve the community, the MPC Community Education Office is offering one of the largest curriculums to date, according to Dr. Keith Merrill, community education dean.

The course being offered in the evening are representative of the various liberal arts and technical vocational fields which have course offerings during the regular day program.

Registration

Mail-in registration forms for the fall semester must be postmarked by August 24 in order that they be accepted by the registration office.

Due to changes in residency requirements, the registration form has additional questions and consequently is two or three pages longer than in the past. Mrs. Louise White, MPC registrat, said that all questions must be answered, and if they are not, state residency cannot be approved and the form will be returned to the applicant.

Mail-in registration is restricted to evening students. Regular evening registration will be held September 5 and 6 from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Students seeking both day and evening classes will register September 5-7 during normal daytime hours.

Late registration for evening classes will be completed before the end of the second class meeting at the registration desk and in conjunction with the instructor. Classes begin September 11.

The requirement for residence has changed to more than just registering to vote in California; one year's presence plus proof of intention to reside, such as a California driver's license and payment of state income tax, are necessary.

Non-residents must pay $27 per unit tuition fee. Other fees for enrollment are minimal. All students pay a $5 building fee. All students 21 or over taking less than 10 class hours per week pay an adult fee of $13.

Although new evening students must fill out an application form, they do not need transcripts sent to the college. Placement examinations are required of all who take any English course; the exam can be taken August 18, 22 and 25 at 9 a.m. or August 23 at 6:30 p.m. in Lecture Forum 103.

Transcripts are needed for those from another college seeking credit towards a degree.

Japanese Beetles Are In San Diego

An infestation of Japanese beetles in the city of San Diego has been reported by the California Department of Food and Agriculture.

Immediate steps are being taken to determine the extent of the infestation and to map plans to fight it, according to Carl Nichols, Assistant Director of the Department. Nichols said representatives of the state are scheduled to meet with federal, city and county officials at 1:30 p.m., Thursday, in San Diego to decide what must be done. The meeting will be held in the office of County Agricultural Commissioner Ken Little.

The infested property is in the Northeastern area of Balboa Park at Morley Field recreational area, which is near the San Diego Zoo. More than 420 properties were inspected in that vicinity, including 25 acres of lawn, with negative results since the first beetle was reported in mid-July. Since that time, Japanese beetle traps have been deployed and eight more beetles have been found, some by visual inspection. State entomologists, experienced with beetle infestations, are convinced there are more in the area. This is based on what they know about the relative efficiency of the beetle traps and upon what they know of the deployment of the traps in the field.

Japanese beetles are very destructive to a wide range of broad leaf plants and trees, both ornamental and commercial crop producers, feeding on leaves, fruit and lawns. Eggs are laid in damp grass and larvae hatch out and burrow a few inches into the soil where they feed on the roots of grass and other plants. They attack the broad leaves of trees and plants when they reach the adult state. The larvae laid this year will appear as adults next June.

The first beetle found this year was picked up by Mrs. John H. Rosenberger of San Diego. She found it in the park area in Morley Field while looking for a suitable site for a bagpipe band picnic.

Lecture Series Planned

Genevieve Howe

Genevieve Howe, Peninsula businesswoman and now a lecturer-teacher, will present a series of four Wednesday night lectures on "Finding Yourself," beginning August 1 at 8 p.m. at Del Monte Manor, 1466 Yosemite, Seaside.

Miss Howe, founder and part-owner of Howe's Men's Hairstyling Shop on Cannery Row, is lecturing in behalf of the Religious Science Society.

She has been in business for a period of 10 years in the Peninsula area, where she has owned beauty shops and men's hair styling shops.

She became interested in Religious Science and went to Chicago, where she attended DePau University, studying philosophy. She became involved in religion and began working with the Church of Religious Science, lecturing and running prayer-theraphy groups.

Her first lecture on August 1 will be on the subject: "How to Control Your Emotions;" August 8 she will lecture on "How to Use Your Mind;" August 15 the subject will be "How To Get People On Your Side;" and August 22, "How To Have A Ball."

She has returned to the Peninsula for the summer, and will be going back to Chicago. A question and answer period will follow each lecture.

SBA Sets Record Highs

Washington, D.C.--More than 20 percent of the total dollars loaned to small businesses by the United States Small Business Administration in its entire 20-year history occurred during calendar year 1972, according to Administrator Thomas S. Kleppe.

The 12-month record was more than $1.9 billion, compared to a cumulative total of $9.4 billion since 1953. The past year eclipsed 1971 by 49 percent.

"It is an indicator of the bullish climate in the small business community today," observed Kleppe. "The small businessman is keen to start new ventures and to expand his production. It means a better employment picture. This agency's loan programs alone resulted in some 338,000 new jobs last year."

Other 1973 records were as follows:

* The nation's banks and other lending institutions invested $1.7 billion in SBA loan programs, an increase of 56 percent over the previous year.

* SBA responded to a record number of natural disasters--87 in 41 states. The agency's aid in rebuilding damaged businesses and homes resulted in 198,000 loans for $1.2 billion, a rise of 221 percent over 1971.

* Hurricane Agnes, which resulted in the most destructive flood in American history, accounted for 125,000 loans for $955 million by the end of the year, and loans continued into 1973.

* Small business received 29 percent of all federal government procurement during fiscal 1972--that is $12.6 billion in prime and subcontracts, a gain of 10 percent in dollars.

* Small Business Investment Companies (SBICs), the SBA-licensed venture capital firms serving small business, made $169 million in financings, up 8 percent for their fiscal year. SBIC assets stood at $673 million, a gain of 10 percent.

* The agency's Local Development Company program, designed primarily to develop small communities and rural areas, funded 760 projects for $91 million, 2 36 percent increase.

* Loans to minorities nted to $309 million, compared to $231 million in 1971, an increase of 34 percent. Sixteen percent of the total SBA loan dollar went to minorities during the year.

Puppetry To Be Taught To Children

The third in a series of Children's Workshops featuring Folk Arts of the Western Hemisphere will be held at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art from August 6-10. Puppetry will be taught by Carolyn and Charles Winans in two sessions from 10 a.m. to noon or 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

The Winans, well-known in this area for their own outstanding puppets, will teach exciting new techniques in the art of making hand puppets, building a stage and producing their own show.

Children aged 7-12 are eligible. All materials are included in the fee of $5 for members and $7 for non-members. Classes are limited to 20 children. Reservations must be accompanied by fee and may be made at the Museum now. For further information call 372-5477.

The Summer Workshop Series has been funded by the Bing Crosby Foundation.

Washington (NBNS) -- Singer Roberta Flack will begin a national fund-raising drive shortly through a nine-nation benefit tour in Africa. The tour will benefit Africare, an organization that seeks to improve health care in rural Africa.

Appointed

Kerry D. Tucker has been appointed director of nutrition communications for Dairy Council of California, Manager Doug Fisk announced recently.

Tucker, 26, formerly headed the association's news bureau. In his new position he will supervise all public relations activities, including the division's nutrition information reference center for medical professionals, news media and the general public.

He is a member of Public Relations Society of America, Sigma Delta Chi (journalistic society), International Association of Business Communicators and Sacramento Press Club.

Dairy Council of California is a statewide nutrition education, communication and research organization sponsored by the entire dairy industry.

Numbers Game Has Little Meaning When One Tries To Evaluate Handicapped

How many handicapped persons are there in this nation?

No one really knows, says the National Easter Seal Society.

Statistics do not measure the human suffering caused by physical handicaps.

But statistics on how many Americans are handicapped or disabled are worth nothing.

According to the National Center for Health Statistics' 1970 survey of the civilian population living in households, there are 23.6 million people--or 11.8 percent--in this group limited in their activities due to chronic conditions.

The limitation applies not only to a person's major activity--work, housekeeping or school--but to particpation in recreational, civic and church activities.

The Social Security Administration in 1967 found a half-million persons, between the ages of 18 and 65, in institutions for the physically and mentally handicapped.

One problem in determing the number of disabled persons in the population is the variation in usage of terms such as "handicap," "disability" and "limitation of activities" by various organizations.

Social Security surveys include only working-aged people and define their ability to be employed or do housework. If a person does not respond to questions on work limitation, he is not defined as "disabled" although he may have functional limitations in other kinds of activity.

But regardless of criteria, survey methods or populations sampled, statistical data do not tell the struggles or extensive professional and personal resources necessary to overcome disabilities and handicaps.

They do not tell the individual efforts of the 16 million persons over 45 who experience activity limitations because of chronic conditions.

A 50-year-old woman who suffers from crippling rheumatoid arthritis is an example. Hers is a story of medication costs to relieve the pain, weekly physical therapy sessions at the rehabilitation center, special transportation which is essential to get her to and from the center, modifications her family must make to allow her to engage in homemaking activities from a seated position. Statistics don't tell of the isolation from friends and community resulting from her lack of mobility and the inaccessibility of regular transportation facilities.

Then there's the 69-year-old man who was learning to enjoy retirement when suddenly his left side was weakened by a stroke. He spent the earliest days of his illness in a nearby hospital, then went home to lie depressed in his bedroom until doctor's orders got him to roll his wheelchair into a rehabilitation center. There he receives physical therapy to teach him to walk again and increase range of motion for his left arm through a battery of exercises designed to strengthen or stretch weak or tight muscels.

Some 5.6 million Americans between 17 and 45 have activity limitations due to chronic conditions. The largest number suffer from back or spinal cord impairments.

For three-year-old Mary, born with cerebral palsy, learning to play with other children and preparing to attend a regular school with her peers means a tough regime. It includes not only exercises to gain balance and muscel coordination but selected recreational activities to improve these and provide the setting for social adjustment.

When it comes to locating the cerebral-palsied child, the middle-aged woman with rheumatoid arthritis, the retired storke victim, the young man with the spinal cord injury--and countless other disabled persons in need of rehabilitation--local Easter Seal societies must go beyond statistics. They must reach out to extend services by identifying community priorities and unmet rehabilitation needs.

'My Fair Lady' To Be Thanksgiving Treat

Burbank -- My Fair Lady, the motion picture musical which won eight Academy Awards, including best picture, will be colorcast as an NBC-TV Thanksgiving Night Special on November 22.

The 1964 Warner Bros., release, based on George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," stars Rex Harrison--who won the Oscar as best actor--and Audrey Hepburn.

George Cukor received an Oscar for best direction.

The film features a memorable score with lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner (lyrics) and music by Frederick Loewe--the team that collaborated on the long-running stage version.

Lerner wrote the screenplay for producer Jack L. Warner.

"By any measure, My Fair Lady is one of the most successful motion pictures of all time," NBC says. "We are pleased to be able to present this all-family event on Thanksgiving night, traditionally reserved for all-family viewing."

My Fair Lady features 18 songs, many of which have become worldwide favorites.

The score is a self-contained hit parade, including such numbers as I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face, On the Street Where You Live, I Could Have Danced All Night, Wouldn't It Be Loverly?, Get Me to the Church on Time, With a Little Bit of Luck, The Rain in Spain, I'm an Ordinary Man and Why Can't the English?

The New York Film Critics cited My Fair Lady as Best Picture and Rex Harrison as Best Actor of 1964.

She Prefers Taking Pictures

Esther Anderson, Sidney Poitier's leading lady in A Warm December, was born in Jamaica.

A tall, stylish, intelligent girl, she went to London in her teens to study acting and enrolled at the Actors' Workshop, where she worked on and off for three years.

She had parts in many English TV shows before making her screen debut in The Touchables, which was shown at the San Francisco Film Festival.

Her favorite TV show was Dixon of Dock Green because, she says, of its extreme professionalism.

In 1968 she co-starred in Two Gentlemen Sharing, which was screened at the Venice Film Festival.

The following year she was in One More Time with Sammy Davis Jr.

Miss Anderson--whose hobbies are reading, traveling and absorbing--then decided to take a sabbatical. She came to the United States and discovered a flair for photo-journalism. She covered the Jamaican elections and in Europe had her first film assignment as a photographer.

Her agent sent her to see Sidney Poitier, who was looking for a Black actress to play the African diplomat with whom he falls in love.

"He was charming and considerate," Esther recalls. "Though I knew he was seeing a lot of girls, he had arranged appointments so that we didn't clash in the outer office."

Three months later as Esther was sailing in the West Indies, working on a travel series she had a phone call from Poitier asking her to meet him in the Bahamas. There he offered her the part. He had tested in Los Angeles, New York, Paris and London before deciding she had the qualities of dignity, fun and tenderness which the role required.

Esther is now living in a studio in Chelsea. After a stint filming with Poitier, she is planning her next trip. "I love to travel. Possessions are utterly unimportant. All I want is my camera. When I've spent my money, then I'll go back to work," she says.

Public Broadcast Center Gets Grant

Washington, D.C. --The Corporation for Public Broadcasting has made a grant of $150,000 to the National Center for Experiments in Television to help finance its fourth year of operation.

Begun in 1967 as an experimental project at San Francisco's public television station KQED with grants from the Rockefeller Foundation and National Endowment for the Arts, the center became a permanent research institution in 1969 with a $100,000 grant from the Corporation.

Grants to the center from CPB have been made in each succeeding year.

Described by CPB President Henry Loomis as "the point of the lance, the very most innovative use of the medium of television in this nation today," the center conducts theoretical and applied research into nontraditional uses of television and electronic creation of video images with a direct video synthesizer.

Last year, the center produced Electronic Notebooks, videotapes which provide a record of the artistic work, research, technical invention and general explorations into the making and experiencing of electronic images.

In the coming year, the center will produce more tapes in this series, dealing with a variety of subjects, and make them as widely available as possible.

What is Christian Science?

It is a religion based on the words and works of Christ Jesus. It has helped many like you to prove in a measure the meaning of Christ Jesus' promise: "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also." It shows the scientific basis of Christianity and how to avail yourself of the laws of God in everyday life. Nation's Car Buyers Are Liking What They See-- If It's Gold, That Is!

Detroit--There's gold on them thar cars!

Gold is now the top color preference among new car buyers, according to a recent Chrysler Motors survey.

"Not only is gold the top color now, but the majority of the top color choices are now the glistening metallic paints," said Bob McCurry, Chrysler VP - U.S. Automotive.

"When our industry started, a buyer could have his choice of any color--as long as it was black. Later, dark greens and blues came along and recently the popularity battle has been between lighter shades of blue and green. Now the gold family is way out front among our owners, but color preferences vary widely among car sizes," McCurry said.

Subcompact buyers show the widest variety of color preferences. On Colt yellow leads the list followed by red, green, bronze and white. Cricket leads with gold, and then green, silver, blue and chestnut.

Gold, amber, or bronze colors account for the top five choices for the compact Valiant. On Dart green, three golds and a green are favorites.

In the sports compacts, the pattern is entirely different. Barracuda's top choices are: red, two blues, a yellow and a green. Challenger leads with red but then follows with yellow, blue, silver and bronze.

"In the intermediate cars we have entirely different patterns of color preferences between the Dodge and Plymouth buyers," McCurry noted. Coronet owners made green their top choice followed by gold, another green, a second gold and a bright blue. Satellite owners prefer the gold family: gold, amber, gold, green, bronze.

"Traditionally the full-size car owners have a shown a preference for darker colors, but this trend seems to be fading," McCurry stated. He noted a difference between the Dodge and Plymouth owners. All top five choices for Fury owners are in the gold family: gold, amber, two golds and a chestnut metallic. In contrast, the Polara buyers put green first, then three golds and another green.

Historically, the larger and luxury car buyers have tended to choose more conservative colors, but that is not happening anymore. Strangely enough white appears as a top-5 choice on only the subcompact Colt and the luxury Imperial.

On Chryslers two golds, amber, green and another gold lead the parade. For Imperial it's two golds, blue, white and chestnut.

ARCO Assures Canadians Tankers Safe

Thornton F. Bradshaw, president of Atlantic Richfield Company, has assured Canadians that his company's tankers slated to carry crude oil from the Trans-Alaska Pipeline would operate under the most stringent environmental safety restrictions in the maritime industry.

In remarks prepared for delivery to Vancouver Rotary Club, Bradshaw described the sophisticated navigation, communications, and environmental protection equipment on Atlantic Richfield tankers being constructed for operation between Alaska and the U.S. west coast.

He noted that a member of the (B.C.) Provincial Legislature has said that the Atlantic Richfield tankers "are probably the best ships that anybody could put in the water. . .In fact, I'd say that if we have to have all oil tankers, I'd say thank God they'll be American built, American owned, and American manned. I have no doubt they'll be the safest ships available."

Bradshaw said that "tankers have been traveling along Canada's west coast for more than 10 years, transporting oil from Alaska's Cook's Inlet to U.S. refineries without significant problems."

"Puget Sound tanker traffic will not increase substantially as the result of TAPS," he said. "Even when the pipeline approaches its maximum capacity of 2 million barrels a day, only six Trans-Alaska tankers per month will enter Puget Sound."

The Atlantic Richfield executive noted that his company's new refinery at Cherry Point, Washington, north of Bellingham, "expects only one tanker every nine days."

Bradshaw pointed out tankers carrying North Slope crude will follow a route well off the Canadian coast, passing Vancouver Island eight to ten miles out and swining 35 miles west in approaching the Straights of Juan de Fuca.

Noting apprehension of "some Canadians" about U.S. tankers operating off the British Columbia coast, Bradshaw reminded his audience that tanker traffic moving regularly along the east coast of the United States carrying imported oil destined for Montreal is accepted "with equanimity."

"In 1970," he said, "oil was delivered to Canada through Portland, Maine in 886 tankers, as against 80 tankers per year forecast for delivery of Alaskan oil to Puget Sound."

Exxon Plans To Invest In Angola Opposed At Stockholders' Meeting

New York--Exxon Corporation faced considerable criticism at its 1973 stockholders' meeting for its plan to invest in Angola, a Portuguese colony in Southern Africa.

The challenge was led by a coalition of eight Protestant denominations called the Church Project on United States Investments in Southern Africa - 1973.

A member of the project, the Unitarian Universalist Association, had filed a stockholder resolution urging Exxon to establish a committee "to fully examine the implications for both the company and for Angola of its proposed new investment in Angola."

The church critics argued that Exxon's investment would assist Portugal, which is fighting in Angola against African movements for independence.

Portugal has over 60,000 troops in Angola.

Support for the resolution came from different quarters.

The Ford Foundation, holder of 500,000 shares of Exxon, voted in favor of the resolution, as did Oberlin College and numerous church bodies.

Harvard University abstained on the resolution but asked management to reexamine the proposed investment paying closer attention to the struggle for independence.

The resolution received 1.5 percent of the stockholder votes cast.

On the occasion of the meeting, the president of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union issued a statement "strongly opposing attempts being made by Exxon Corporation to secure exploration rights for oil offshore the Portuguese colony of Angola."

Among the speakers for the resolution were Margaret Williams, for the Unitarian Universalist Association, Mustaffa Sam, representative of the United Nations Office of the Organization of African Unity, Abel Cuimaraes, an Angolan living in New York, and the Reverend Lawrence Henderson, a returned missionary who spent 22 years in Angola.

The Reverend Henderson, speaking before the stockholder audience of over 1,000 persons, explained his opposition to Exxon's going into Angola:

"At this very moment, Angolan minutemen are fighting for freedom from Portugal in the village of Angola. If at the simple invitation of the Portuguese government Exxon goes into Angola, the call will go out as in 1776: 'The Redcoats are coming,' or translated in 1973, 'Exxon is coming.'"

Speaking for the Organization of African Unity, which represents 41 independent Black African states, Sam urged Exxon not to jeopardize its friendship and commercial relations with the rest of Africa by going into Angola.

Margaret Williams said, speaking on behalf of the Unitarian Universalist Association:

"Any decision to invest in the colony of Angola reflects gross insensitivity to the aspirations for freedom of the Angolan people and is an open insult to Black Americans in this country...Do not talk to us of the so-called energy crisis. Human lives and dignity are at stake."

The challengers said the taxes Exxon would pay Portugal would subsidize Portuguese military control of Angola.

A. F. Grospiron, president of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, sent a statement reading:

"The Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union is strongly opposed to attempts being made by Exxon Corporation to secure exploration rights for oil offshore the Portuguese colony of Angola."

Gulf Oil Expands Its Student Loan Program To Ten Institutions

Ten colleges and universities which will participate in Gulf Oil Corporation's million dollar student loan program during the 1973-74 school year are: Grambling College, Grambling, Lousiana; Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Pennsylvania; Meharry Medical College, Nashville, Tennessee; University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Indiana; Point Park College, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Rice University, Houston, Texas; University of San Diego, Alcala Park, California; Texas A & I University, Kingsville, Texas and Texas Tech, Lubbock, Texas.

The program, which benefits college students who have financial need, was begun during the 1971-72 school year.

Since then Gulf grants have gone to Assumption College, Drexel University, Duquesne University, Hampton Institute, University of Miami, Northeastern University, Susquehanna University, Temple University, Texas Southern University, Tulane University and Wilkes College.

The Gulf Student Loan Fund, believed to be the first such program provided by industry, has an initial budget of $1 million.

The program is in addition to Gulf's scholarship grant programs, through which the company supports about 300 students in colleges and universities each year.

Student Loan Fund Grants establish at participating schools a permanent source of money, from which the schools may make loans to some graduate--but primarily to the undergraduate student.

This makes borrowing funds possible for students who would otherwise be unable to secure adequate help through traditional scholarship, work-study or loan channels, because of personal, financial or related circumstances.

Loans from the fund are made at the lowest feasible interest rates which are consistent with or below those which students must pay to secure funds from other sources but in any case not above the prime bank rate at the time of borrowing.

Gulf is hopeful that other corporations will establish stimilar student loan funds in addition to their traditional aid-to-education programs.

Gulf believes this can become an important part of the "aid package" needed to help students meet the rising costs.

Tryout On State Cars Is Urged

Sacramento-- Thousands of state-owned 1966 through 1970 cars would be used for tests of devices designed to limit emissions of oxides of nitrogen, under a recent proposal of State Senator John Holmdahl (D, Alameda County).

Says Holmdahl:

"Before the State imposes a mandatory program on 5,000,000 private car owners, it should assume that same burden for its own vehicles.

"Such action would not only be fair but, in addition, it would allow realistic testing of each of the six devices thus far approved by the Air Resources Board.

"This testing during the delay in commencing the huge, expensive public program required by present law will allow evaluation of the use of the devices, including the extend of increase in gas consumption, overheating with possible valve damage to the vehicle and malfunction in the vehicle's operation.

"It is far better that the true seriousness of these shortcomings of the approved devices be determined by actual use on a broad scale -- and before private car owners are required to buy them."

DATSUN SAVES

About a gallon of gasoline a day

With the demand for fuel rising faster than the supply, here's one way to help ease our energy crisis. According to the latest U.S. Bureau of Highways figures, the national average for gas mileage is about 13.5 miles per gallon. Or, over twice the national average! The average car in the U.S. is driven just over 10,000 miles a year, so you can save about a gallon of gas every day by driving a Datsun 1200. With gasoline prices up, it's a considerable savings of another important resource: Drive a Datsun 1200. You'll decide.

DATSUN GETS BEST MILEAGE IN U.S. TEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Environmental Protection Agency tests conducted on cars designed to meet the 1973 air pollution standards showed Tuesday that the Datsun gave the best mileage — nearly 29 miles to a gallon.

The Datsun 1200 used a 71-cubic-inch engine, weighed 2,000 pounds, and was equipped with a manual, four-speed transmission. Its mileage total per gallon was 28.7, EPA said.

The highest fuel consumption was turned in by the 4,000-pound Ferrari-Daytona. Its 268-cubic-inch engine produced 6.3 miles to the gallon, EPA said.

Among other low fuel consumers, General Motors' Chevrolet Vega got 21.5 miles to a gallon using a 140-cubic-inch engine in a 2,750-pound car and a manual, four-speed transmission. Ford's Pinto got 21.4 miles to the gallon using a 98-cubic-inch engine and a manual, four-speed transmission in a car weighing 2,500 pounds.

The gas mileage tests were part of the 1973 auto pollution tests conducted on all cars sold in the United States.

According to the EPA, the cars were operated on a device that simulated urban driving conditions.

Signs Contracts With Black Insurance Firms

United Air Lines recently signed contracts with two Black insurance companies, each to reinsure $25 million in group life insurance under the airline's overall group life insurance coverage.

The insurance companies are Golden State Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Los Angeles and Supreme Life Insurance Company of America, headquartered in Chicago.

Golden State, founded in 1925, lists assets totaling approximately $40 million and is licensed in 19 states and the District of Columbia.

Supreme Life, with assets of $39 million, began business in 1921 and is licensed in 11 states and the District of Columbia.

"We are pround to be among the growing number of corporations who are becoming more and more cognizant of the important role of private enterprise by Black companies in the economic community," said Waller B. Smith, United's director of insurance.

"We recognize the vital function they perform and realize our commitment to corporate social responsibility."

5 On Stage, Others Off

The 5th Dimension is comprised of Marilyn McCoo, Florence LaRue Gordon, Ron Townson, Lamonte McLemore and Billy Davis, Jr.

The nucleus of the group may be considered the three men, who grew up together in St. Louis, Missouri.

Misses McCoo and Gordon--both college graduates--were recruited in California, where they were competing in a beauty contest covered by McLemore, who at the time was a professional photographer.

On stage, they are only five but behind the 5th Dimension there are some 15 people, including their manager, road manager, sound man and musicians -- not to mention the men who handle the ton of sound equipment, instruments, and wardrobe.

When the 5th Dimension is not recording, the cast and crew travel as a team, playing concerts in nightclubs and on college campuses.

In one year, the 5th Dimension spent only 23 days off the road.

Female Trio Signed

Kenny Gamble and Leon Huff, whose success with such male vocal groups as the O'Jays, Harold Melvin and the Blue Notes and the Intruders is well known, have signed their first female group, the Three Degrees, to an exclusive recording contract.

The deal calls for the talented trio--Fayette Pinkney, Sheila Ferguson and Valerie Holiday--to record on Gamble Records for five years.

Known as a strong nightery and supper club act, the Three Degrees had everything for them except strong recording material.

"I am confident that will change," says Gamble. "We believe the Three Degrees will be the next female supergroup. And we will do everything possible to make it happen."

Coasters Revive Fifties

The Coasters, one of the featured groups in Let the Good Times Roll, the Metromedia Producers Corporation film for Columbia Pictures, vividly re-create the 1950s with stirring renditions of their universal hits, Yackity Yack, Charlie Brown and Along Came Jones, among others.

Situation comedy is The Coasters' forte, and time and again in the multiscreen musical fiomed with Richard Nader as concert producer, The Coasters display clever and colorful playlets on everyday themes.

Named for their West Coast origin, The Coasters were originally known as the Robins. Their first record, Down In Mexico, recorded in the spring of 1957, exploded them into fame. Their songs, their parodies and the tunes became million sellers.

Joining The Coasters in Let The Good Times Roll, which was filmed in the unheard-of-time of three days, are such rock 'n roll superstars as Chubby Checker, Chuck Berry, Little Richard, Bill Haley and the Comets, Fats Dominor, The Shirelles, Bo Diddley and The Five Satins.

RE-CREATION

Filmed entirely on TV location in Savannah, Georgia, F. Scott Fitzgerald and The Last of the Belles recreates the lazy, halcyon days before 1920 and the frenetic careless days a decade later. No one has ever brought to life that generation of people as vividly as F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Slower Drivers Warned

If you create a freeway bottleneck by poking along in the left-hand or middle freeway lanes, you can expect to be stopped by a California Highway Patrolman.

So says Walter Pudinski of CHP, who explains the need for stepping up enforcement to eliminate congestion problems and the accidents caused by drivers who clog freeways.

California law provides that vehicles with a maximum speed limit of 55 mpm -- including three-axle trucks and all vehicles towing trailers -- must be driven in the right-hand lane of the multi-lane roadways except when preparing to turn. When passing, they must use the lane immediately left of the right-hand lane, returning to the right-hand lane when the pass is completed.

"The law also requires any vehicle moving slower than the normal flow of traffic to be driven in the right-hand lane, or as close to right-hand edge of the road as is practicable," says Pudinski.

Not Enough Approved Tribute

Nashville (NBNS) -- The Tennessee House of Representatives has refused to honor Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. for his contributions to human rights.

Representative Lois DeBerry (D, Memphis), the site of Dr. King's assassination, introduced the resolution. But on a roll call vote, the resolution received only 36 votes. There were two votes against it. But 50 votes are required for passage of resolutions because there are 99 members in the House. Ms. DeBerry is one of seven Blacks in the House.
